Why can't the Sex Industry Regulate It'self??

When are the 'powers that be' going to acknowledge that a Sex Worker does have a brain and is educated? I'm sure if they bothered to do a survey they would find that they have performed numerous and varied careers before or whilst being a Sex Worker which have included being a Doctor, Solicitor, Lawyer, Accountant and even a Police Constable.

They are capable of running their own businesses as an independent sex worker, kept their records to an accounting standard, paid their Taxes, BAS statements, understood the laws and worked within them. Why then would they want to work for someone else who will take a portion of their money to answer an enquiry, make their appointment, drive them there and back [for yet another fee] all things they have been capable of doing for themselves for years?

What qualifications do 'Brothel Owners and Staff' have that sets them above the experienced independent sex worker? Most Brothel Owners and Receptionists do not have any experience in the Sex Industry, have never been sex workers yet they are going to be appointed to 'oversee and regulate' independent sex workers! Where would they start? [apart from taking money from them for what? Nothing! But just because they can!!!]

Isn't this discrimination? Which other career does the law enforce this type of regulation upon and prevent them from owning and managing your own business? Haven't the sex workers proved their capabilities of being 'self employed' and meeting all the requirements that go along with it and adhering to the laws as and when they have been translated to us?
