One night I went to small party with a few people at a friends house. One friend arrived later and insisted that he drive us in to a Caxton Street nightclub to see his friends' band play live, as he was sober and had a vehicle.

Knowing that I would have to make my way home from here, I brought along my unopened alcohol in my backpack. Nightclub Security Guards became aware of this as I was exiting to have a cigarette and I was refused entry back into the club.

Because I had no mobile phone I was unable to let my friends know what had happened to me and so I insisted on staying outside the nightclub until one of them came outside so I could let them know.

At this point the police were called and I was arrested and charged. AS USUAL.

And as usual I was behaving responsibly and committing no crime whatsoever.
